Tayyab Agha

Hiding Mullah Omar's Death Historical Blunder

KABUL - Tendering resignation as head of Taliban's political office in Qatar, Mullah Mohammad Tayyab Agha has said keeping late Mullah Muhammad Omar's death secret is a historical blunder. Tayyab Agha expressed these views in his interview with Al-Jazeera TV on Tuesday and called Mullah Mansoor's nomination as yet another wrong decision by Taliban. According to sources, Tayyab Agha mentioned in his resignation that leaders who had been nominated out of Afghan territory did not meet good fortune. "Keeping Mullah Omar's death secret is a historic blunder. Peace process through Pakistan is not more than a game," he said, adding he quit his job as head of Taliban's political office in Qatar and would not share any news from the office. He would not intervene in any official matter of the office from now onward. He asked Taliban leaders to nominate their leader and made all other important decisions in Afghanistan instead. The differences among Taliban group spread soon after the announcement of Mullah Omar's demise last week. Afghan government announced Mullah Omar's had died in a hospital in Karachi in Pakistan while Taliban rejected the allegations but had not... (More on P4)...(10)

High Peace Committee Urges Taliban to Resume Talks

JALALABAD - Members of high peace committee in eastern Nangarhar province on Tuesday urged Taliban to seize opportunity and enter into result-oriented talks to put an end to the violence in the country.

The high peace committee denounced Mullah Akhtar Mohammad Mansoor's message to continue the insurgency.

The second round of peace parleys was delayed soon after the reports of Taliban supreme leader Mullah Mohammad Omar's demise.

Haji Malak Nazir, chief of high peace committee, urged Taliban fighters to resume talks. "It was reported that Mullah Omar was died years before then who did fight and who did share media reports with his name?" he questioned.

"You should come to Afghanistan if you are Afghan and you should stop further bloodshed of Afghan if you are true Afghan but if you are not Afghan than many foreigners eager to shed Afghans' bloodshed. It will not make big difference if you are among them too," he remarked.

Maulvi Abdul Zahir Haqqani, a religious leader, also called peace talks the only way to settle dispute.

Abdul Aziz Khairkhwah, another cleric, suggested Taliban to prefer peace talks over fighting since peace was the only option. (Pajhwok)

Afghan Taliban Deny 'Propaganda' About Succession Crisis

KABUL - Afghanistan's Taliban on Tuesday urged followers to disregard "enemy propaganda" about internal fractures in their movement following the death of longtime leader Mullah Mohammad Omar and to unite behind his chosen successor.

The statement, signed by spokesmen Zabihullah Mujahid and Qari Yusuf Ahmadi, called on supporters to "help write messages and letters on social media" to show a united front.

The Taliban confirmed the death of Mullah Omar, the reclusive leader who ruled Afghanistan from 1996-2001 and sheltered Osama bin Laden, after Afghanistan's security agency said last week that he had died in April 2013.

His deputy, Mullah Akhtar Mansoor, was chosen to succeed him by the insurgent group's seven-member supreme council, but Mullah Omar's relatives - his son Yaqub and brother... (More on P4)...(17)

Gatherings Mourning Mullah Omar 'Legitimate Target': NDS

KABUL - Banning all mourning ceremonies for deceased Taliban leader Mullah Omar, the spy agency on Monday warned that any gatherings condoling his death would be a "legitimate target" for Afghan forces.

The announcement comes hours after Afghan forces targeted a funeral ceremony in absentia for Omar in the Qarah Bagh district of southern Ghazni province, five kilometers from Ghazni City, the provincial capital. "Mullah Omar was the biggest cause of war and backwardness in the modern history of Afghanistan," the National Directorate of Security (NDS)

said in a statement. It said Mullah Omar was responsible for the killing of... (More on P4)...(13)

Officials

Kabul Police to Round up Drug Addicts in the Next Week

KABUL - Kabul Police Chief Abdul Rahman Rahimi said on Tuesday that in the next week police will round up all drug addicts on the streets of Kabul city and that they will also arrest drug dealers and alcohol sellers.

"We are assuring the country's residents that we will gather all addicts from around the city in the upcoming week. This work is easy for us but a lack of treatment facilities for these people is a big issue," he said.

He said police will also arrest those illegally selling Afghan security force uniforms and illegal arms dealers - both of which are used by insurgents. "We will also arrest those who are selling security force uniforms and weapons and we will begin a serious program to prevent insurgents from using the security forces' uniforms and weapons," he added. This comes after TOLONews reported Sunday on the growing... (More on P4)...(15)

Red Crescent Provides 3,600 Persons with Artificial Limbs

LASHKARGAH - At least 3,600 persons who have lost body organs due to incessant war have been provided with artificial limbs, Red Crescent (RC) official says on Tuesday.

Director Red Crescent Ahmad Basel Halaq told a press conference that RC had assisted more than 6,000 persons with artificial limbs in last six years.

"The number of disabled persons would increase had the fighting continued with the same pace," he said, adding that RC had supported around 1,300 families with edible items and around 200 security forces were trained against Principle of War during the current year.

RC had provided more than 2000 injured with assistance, Halaq said, demanding the warring parties to follow principle of war which had been ignored during the war.

Deputy Governor Mohammad Jan Rasooly asked RC to expend activities in the province... (More on P4)...(18)

Kandaharis Snub Mansoor's Vow to Continue Insurgency

KANDAHAR CITY - Prominent clerics, elders and civil society activists in southern Kandahar on Monday denounced the new Taliban leader's message to continue the insurgency and asked him to resume peace talks.

A day after Mullah Omar's demise, the Taliban announced Mullah Akhtar Mansoor as their new leader and Maulvi Haibatullah Akhundzada and Sirajuddin Haqqani as his deputies.

In his maiden public audio message, Mansoor vehemently opposed the nascent peace talks as enemy propaganda. While calling for unity in Taliban's ranks, he said: "We will not be waiting for the peace process but will continue our struggle." At a gathering at the press club here, religious scholar Maulvi Obaidullah Faizy-abicondemned Mansoor's vow to continue the insurgency and abandon the talks. He accused Pakistan of playing a double game in sponsoring the talks and breaking the news of Omar's death only two days before the second round.

He believed the war in Afghanistan was being perpetuated by foreign intelligence networks and the Afghans could not be part of it. He insisted peace was the need of the... (More on P4)...(19)
