

US Receives Turkey's Formal Extradition Request for Cleric Gulen

WASHINGTON - The U.S. has received a formal extradition request from Turkey for U.S.-based cleric Fethullah Gulen, the U.S. State Department said Tuesday.

However, the extradition request is not related to the failed coup attempt last month in Turkey, State Department spokesperson Mark Toner said at a regular press briefing.

"Obviously, it's related to other reasons for which they want him extradited for," Toner said. "But I don't know the specifics on that."

The spokesperson said once the U.S. makes a full assessment of the documents, it will make a determination on the extradition case.

A delegation of U.S. officials from the Justice and State Department arrived in Ankara on Monday to discuss developments following the failed coup.

The four U.S. officials are expected to discuss with their Turkish counterparts on Tuesday and Wednesday the extradition of Gulen, whom Ankara has blamed for masterminding the failed July 15 coup attempt. Tensions brewed after Ankara expressed its discontent over lack of support from Washington in the wake of the failed coup. (Xinhua)

S. Korea Slams DPRK's Test-Firing of Submarine-Launched Ballistic Missile

SEOUL - South Korea on Wednesday slammed the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) for its test-firing of a ballistic missile from a submarine off its east coast into the sea. Seoul's foreign ministry said in a statement that the country strongly denounces the DPRK's firing of a submarine-launched ballistic missile (SLBM) once again following a series of provocations such as nuclear test and ballistic missile launches, which are in violation of UN Security Council resolutions, in defiance of repeated warnings from the international community.

The ministry urged Pyongyang to immediately stop nuclear and missile developments threatening peace and security on the Korean Peninsula and in the world, and to dismantle its nuclear program in a complete, verifiable and ... (More on P4)...(25)

Trump Repeats Tough Immigration Policy

HOUSTON - U.S. Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump on Tuesday night repeated his immigration policy of building a wall on the U.S.-Mexico border and speeding up deportations of illegal immigrants.

Speaking at a rally in the Texas capital city of Austin, Trump pledged to build a wall on the U.S.-Mexico border, make Mexico pay for it, unleash federal border patrol officers and, first and foremost, adhere to the rule of law -- a clear and disapproving reference to U.S. President Barack Obama's executive orders protecting certain immigrants from deportation, according to local daily the Dallas Morning News.

In a Fox News taping in Austin, Trump said: "We are going to build a wall. Yeah, 100 percent. It's so simple."

"(Former U.S. President George W.) Bush and even Obama sent people back so we can be more aggressive with that, but we can follow the laws," he said.

The Republican presidential candidate, however, sounded more sympathetic to hard-working immigrants who entered the United States illegally but have been since law-abiding and productive. Asked if he would accommodate those people if he is elected president, Trump said that he would try. (Xinhua)

Russia Opens Criminal Case against Top Ukrainian Military Officials

MOSCOW - The Russian Investigative Committee said Wednesday that it has opened a criminal case against senior Ukrainian military officials, accusing them of using forbidden means and methods of war against civilians. "The National Guard of Ukraine and the Ukrainian Armed Forces have periodically carried out precision shelling of civilian infrastructure," the committee said in a statement. It said that highly destructive heavy weapons were used in such operations in eastern Ukraine since Feb. 15 when a cease-fire between the Ukrainian government and insurgents was announced.

The committee said it had collected sufficient proof that those actions against civilians were taken on the orders of Ukrainian Defense Minister Stepan Poltorak, Chief of the General Staff Viktor Muzhenko, and some other senior officials.

The committee said the shelling partially or completely destroyed more than 183 civilian infrastructure objects, killed seven civilians and injured 74 others, including seven minors. (Xinhua)

Turkey's Cross Border Operation in Syria Targets IS Militants: Erdogan

ANKARA - Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan said on Wednesday that a Turkish cross-border operation in northern Syria is a response to terror attacks carried out by Islamic State (IS) militants on southern Turkey in recent months, Anadolu Agency reported. Earlier in the day, Turkish military, backed by international coalition airstrikes, launched an operation involving fighter jets and tanks to drive IS militants out of the Syrian border town of Jarabulus.

As many as 46 IS militants have been killed so far in the operation, Dogan News agency reported. According to military sources, 81 targets were destroyed by artillery fire and tanks stationed on Turkish soil. "All the attacks which happened in Gaziantep and Kilis brought this issue to this point," Erdogan said in a speech in Ankara. Since January, rocket attacks on the Turkish province of Kilis from IS-held territory in Syria have killed at least 21 people. Other attacks targeted Gaziantep, the latest of which was Saturday's suicide bombing of a wedding that killed 54. (Xinhua)

Damascus Condemns Turkish Military Intervention inside Syria

DAMASCUS - Syria's Foreign Ministry condemned the entry of Turkish forces into northern Syria on Wednesday, saying any anti-terror efforts should be coordinated with the Syrian government.

The ministry said Turkish tanks and armored vehicles crossed the Turkish-Syrian borders on Wednesday morning under the air cover of a U.S.-led coalition toward the Syrian city of Jarabulus. It said the Turkish aim of entering Jarabulus was not to fight the Islamic State (IS) terrorists, and that the move was another manifestation of terrorism, as Turkey is substituting one terror group with another.

The ministry was apparently referring to Turkey-backed Syrian rebels who have crossed the borders under the Turkish forces. (Xinhua)

Iran Renews NAM Call for Global Nuclear Disarmament

TEHRAN - Iran has renewed the call for the total elimination of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) across the world, saying the international community must work to prevent terror groups from obtaining such banned arms.

Addressing the UN Security Council on Tuesday on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement (NAM), Iran's UN Ambassador Gholamali Khoshrou expressed concerns over the slow pace of de-nuclearization and a lack of progress in the dismantling of WMDs.

Khoshrou, whose country holds the rotating presidency of NAM, described nuclear disarmament as the movement's "absolute priority," demanding that the concept of using nukes or threatening to use them be omitted from international military doctrines. The Iranian diplomat warned against the access of terror groups to internationally-banned weapons, calling for cooperation among world countries to prevent the terrorists from acquiring such arms. "NAM welcomes the establishment of zones free from nuclear weapons across the world and calls on all countries that are in possession of such weapons to unconditionally" join the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT), said Khoshrou.
