General John F. Campbell

ANSF Stronger than Armed Taliban

KABUL - General John F. Campbell, the current commander of the Resolute Support Mission and United States Forces said that that 80 % of Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF) are in their stations in a defensive status rather than attacking to Taliban.

General Commander of the Resolute Support Mission said that he considers Afghan troops stronger than the armed Taliban but also emphasized that there are ghost soldiers in local police ranks.

"Eighty percent of Afghan security forces in their stations do not run military exercises and ambush the Taliban," John Campbell said.

However, the ministry of national defense neither confirms and nor rejects the US general statements.

"There are ghost soldiers in local and national police that their money and privileges are taken by commanders," Campbell added.

General John F. Campbell further added that this year's fighting and battle season is not over and the war will continue in Kandahar, Helmand and Nangarhar; stressing Afghan troops for the first time will ...(More on P4)...(1)
