Abdullah Calls ANSF to Act Against Hizb At-Tahrir

KABUL - Hizb at-Tahrir party of liberation is an international pan-Islamic political organization, it has been active in Afghanistan since seven years, and necessary measurements should be taken place to stop the activities of the following terrorist group in Afghanistan, officials in National Unity Government said.

Chief of Executive Officer, Abdullah Abdullah has stated that the following radical terrorist group is trying to expand its activities among academic centers in Afghanistan by encouraging young generation to launch terrorist activities in Universities. Afghan officials have identified the two main base of the Hizb at-Tahrir in Nangarhar and Kabul Universities, they are trying to provoke young generation against their existed Government.

CEO Abdullah Abdullah has said, "that Hizb at-Tahrir is trying to expand its activities among young generation in academic centers where most of young people both boys and girls are studying for their future, Hizb at-Tahrir is the civilian branch derived from the main terrorist Networks, they have been here close to Afghan security forces eyes but they have done nothing to identify them."

Officials in Ministry of Interior Affairs mentioned that no chance will be given to those trying to destroy the current system in Afghanistan. MoI spokesman Sediq Sediqee said, "We will not give the chance to any group to create chaos, they are counted enemies of Afghanistan and will be executed according to laws." (ATN)

Yacoobi Fears Girls will Deprive of Education again

TORONTO - When Sakena Yacoobi ran 80 underground schools for 3,000 girls in Afghanistan under the Taliban, some teachers hid books in sacks of wheat and rice to avoid detection. "It is very hard to operate a school where the students cannot be seen," says Yacoobi, who is known as Afghanistan's "mother of education."

"It was through those procedures, innovation and creativity that we were successful."

After the Taliban seized power in the mid-1990s and forbade girls from attending school, hiding books was among the more straightforward logistical ... (More on P4)...(10)

UNESCO, MoIC Call for Entries in Photo Competition

KABUL - 'Show us your Afghanistan' photographic competition has been officially launched on Monday in Kabul and calls on photographers from around the country to send in their best images to showcase Afghanistan's rich history and vibrant culture.

Organized by UNESCO and the Afghan Ministry of Information and Culture (MoIC), and financed by South Korea, the aim of the competition is to get people to use their smartphones and cameras "to tell the story of the Afghanistan we are proud of," said organizers in a statement.

Head of UNESCO's cultural programs Sara Noshadi said: "Becoming familiar with cultural heritage will help identify the national heritage of people and find common ground which will help give people hope for the future."

Afghans So Desperate for Asylum, Buying Fake Threat Letters

KABUL - Threatening letters from the Taliban, once tantamount to a death sentence, are now being forged and sold to Afghans who want to start a new life in Europe.

The handwritten notes on the stationery of the so-called Islamic Emirate of Afghanistan were traditionally sent to those alleged to have worked with Afghan security forces or U.S.-led troops, listing their "crimes" and warning that a "military commission" would decide on their punishment. They would close with the mafia-style caveat that insurgents "will take no further responsibility for what happens in the future."

But nowadays the Taliban say they have mostly ceased the practice, while those selling forged threat letters are doing a brisk business as tens of thousands of Afghans flee to Europe, hoping to claim asylum. Forgers say a convincing threat letter can go for up to $1,000.

"Of the threat letters now being presented to European authorities by Afghans, I'd say only ... (More on P4)...(9)

Russian Airstrikes Destroy 1,000 IS Oil Tankers in Syria

DAMASCUS - Russian airstrikes over the past five days have destroyed 1,000 tankers of stolen crude oil the Islamic State (IS) group was moving in the countryside of Syria's northern province of al-Raqqah, state news agency SANA reported on Monday.

Citing a Syrian military source, SANA said the Russian airstrikes also destroyed oil refineries in the southern countryside of al-Raqqah, the de facto capital of the IS group, and in the northern countryside of the eastern province of Deir al-Zour. The strikes are the latest in an intensified series of Russian air operations against the IS terror group in Syria.

Oil has been one of the main lifelines the IS has been relying on to finance its terror operations in Syria and abroad. Russia has been pounding IS positions in Syria since late September, with Syrian officials hailing the strikes as helping the war on terror. (Xinhua)

72 Taliban Insurgents Killed in Helmand Military Operations

LASHKARGAH - At least 72 Taliban insurgents were killed in two separate military operations in southern Helmand province, the provincial police said in a statement Monday.

According to police, the first military operation was launched in Sangin district of the province with the support of foreign troops. In this operation 45 Taliban insurgents were killed and a number of them were injured.

The second operation conducted by 215 Maiwand Military Corp in Greshk district of the province resulted in the death of 27 Taliban insurgents.

There were no civilians casualties, according to the statement.

The statement did not provide more details about the operations nor on casualties sustained by Afghan security forces.

Helmand has experienced years of war despite ongoing military action. In 2010 a massive military operation was carried out by U.S and Afghan troops in Marja district but after clearing the district insurgents returned. (Tolonews)

Afghan Taliban Attack on Dissidents Causes Internal Problems

ISLAMABAD - The leader of the Afghan Taliban, Mullah Akhtar Mansoor, ordered a new offensive against the armed movement dissidents, which could cause more divisions, Pakistani media reported Monday.

The appointment of Mullah Mohammad Rasool as head of the unhappy faction infuriated Mansoor and his followers, who launched a military operation against the rebels in the southern province of Zabul, said to the paper a source from the group.

The fighting has killed dozens of fighters. The bloody offensive brought as side effect that several heavyweights of the organization threaten to leave the group, it stresses.

Mullah Yaqoob and Mullah

Abdul Manan, son and brother of the late spiritual leader of the movement, Mullah Omar, respectively, are among them.

Both rejected the appointment of Mansoor to lead the insurgent organization, but then they swore loyalty, says The Express Tribune, warning that now they could get away again from the new leadership.

Tension could increase with the imminent offensive planned by Mansoor's commanders against Rasool and his supporters in the provinces of Farah and Herat, adds the text.

However, the Taliban spokesman, Zabihullah Mujahid, denied these war plans, calling them propaganda.

Though it is unclear what the final ... (More on P4)...(12)
