

World Access to Information Day Marked in Kabul

The World Access to Information was marked and the law on access to information as the best law, was unveiled by Second Vice-President, Mohammad Sarwar Danesh at the Government Media and Information Center (GMIC), a statement from the Vice-President Office said.

KABUL - Afghanistan law on access to information scored 139 to be ranked first worldwide. The country's second vice president, in the ceremony attended by a number of media activists, civil society and in charges and representatives from government and international institutions, spokespersons of the state administration, congratulated the world access to information day to the country's entire media activists, and supporters of freedom of expression, journalists and particularly to the freedom-loving people and journalists society of Afghanistan, the statement said. Danesh called managing the free cycle of information, the main responsibility of the government and added that without it, this was impossible to access freedom of expression. "With all challenges and defections ahead, today, on behalf of the leadership of the national unity government, I assure the entire people of Afghanistan, particularly the media and civil society of Afghanistan to use all my power and possibilities in implementation of the law ... Trump Awards Medal to Soldier for Heroic Action in Afghanistan

WASHINGTON - A former Army medic who received the nation's highest military honor Monday for braving heavy gunfire to save lives in Afghanistan was rejected by the military the first time he tried to enlist. "Boy that was a bad mistake. But they made up for it, right," President Donald Trump said in a formal White House ceremony where 250 people gathered to laud former Staff Sgt. Ronald Shurer II for his heroic actions in 2008 in a remote part of Afghanistan. Shurer, a native of Fairbanks, Alaska, was a senior medical sergeant in the special forces on April 6, 2008 when his team encountered machine gun and sniper fire and rocket-propelled grenades from militants. Shurer stabilized one soldier, then fought his way through a barrage of bullets and up a mountain to the lead members of the unit. There, he treated and stabilized four more soldiers. Shurer helped ... (More on P4)...(5)

Afghan Council Seeks Pakistani Cleric's Help to End War

PESHAWAR - A prominent Pakistani cleric says an Afghan delegation has asked him to mediate between the Kabul government and the Taliban to help resolve the 17-year-long war in Afghanistan. Maulana Samiul Haq runs a religious school, the Haqqania seminary in the town of Akora Khattak in Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa province, which borders Afghanistan. Many Taliban figures studied there. Haq's seminary says he met with the Afghan representatives on Monday night. Haq told the Afghan representatives he also wishes to see an "end to jihad, end to bloodshed and freedom of Afghanistan with supremacy of Islam." He suggested a secret meeting between Afghan religious leaders and the Taliban, "without U.S. and Pakistani interference." The Afghan delegation included former governor of Nangarhar province, Attaullah Lodin, government peace committee member Qasim Haleemi and others. (AP)

Greece Police Arrest 40 Afghans Over Attack on Syrian Man

ATHENS - Greece police have detained 40 Afghan nationals for questioning following a large brawl on Saturday between a group of Afghan and Syrian migrants at a state-run camp of Malakasa, on the outskirts of Athens, that resulted in the death of a 31-year-old Syrian man, according to Greece's local newspaper Kathimerini report. The report said that the police intercepted the 40 suspects on a train in nearby Avlona as they apparently sought to flee the region. Another 70 people -- all Syrians -- believed to have been involved in the ... (More on P4)...(7)
