Afghan Refugees Describe Warm Welcome from Local People in New Home after Calais Eviction

CALAIS - There was a lot of anger and trepidation on Monday (24 October) as more refugees feared they would face rejection and an uncertain future after they walked in the dark about which French authorities would send them to the planned demolition of the camp.

While more than 25% of the 'Jungle' refugee camp's population left ahead of the eviction of being displaced across 450 reception centres in France, 15,000 to the UK for others, the group of Afghans spent their first night sleeping in their new accommodation in Foyes de la Lente.

Natty Miles, who worked in the Calais Women's and Children's Volunteer Coordination, met the group of Afghans on 17th October – three days after they had arrived in the camp, home to 9,100. The little group of men came from different Afghan cities to Calais and met in Calais, formed the volunteers' group 'Supported family support group'.

In the camp – that is expected to be demolished from Thursday – they were in constant communication with each other after each shelter's chairs and 'Mans on PL-32'.
