Kerry Warns of Tragedy if Afghanistan is Forgotten About

NEW YORK - Addressing a sideline trilateral session between the U.S, Afghanistan and China at the UN's General Assembly in New York late Saturday US Secretary of State John Kerry warned the international community that it would be a tragedy if they forgot about Afghanistan.

He called on the international community and on China to help the country end the war.

"It would be a tragedy to just turn around and walk away and abandon this effort," he said.

Kerry said there isn't a "bigger challenge in the world today that can't be addressed more effectively without China's help". "So we welcome China's help particularly as a near neighbor and as a country that understands very very clearly the cross currents that are at stake in Afghanistan today."

"I urge all of you to keep Afghanistan among the highest development and security assistance priorities. We have won an amazing battle these last years to get to where we are," he said. Meanwhile, China's Foreign Minister Wang Yi said that he understands that the Taliban and Kabul ...(More on P4)...(1)
